

I think the fact that the networks aren't talking about this subject openly demonstrates that we already have too small a group controlling too much media. The airwaves belong to everyone. Why is it that there are people on the FCC that want the media be less of a public service than it is now. Why the garbage is on the networks without criticism is a shame. Tv, radio, and newspapers are where public information is obtained. On radio in my area if I don't listen to public, I don't find anything worth wasting my time hearing.

Why is it that all the major outlets cheered the war in Iraq, and, also lead the criticism of people who had thoughtful objections. This is a terrible lesson to show our children about america functions.
